

Painting Without Borders

Instructor: Patrick Saunders

The goal of this class is to show that with one approach, you can paint any subject in any situation. The subjects that you choose are completely up to you, but I recommend choosing subjects that interest you. You are not at all required to paint the same or similar subjects to my demos. Paint what you love! Please bring photos of your favorite subject to work from, or even a still life. I cannot stress enough that it is extremely difficult to paint from your iphone - way too small! Printed photos are best, and if you can print as large as you are going to paint, even better! I will often print my photo the same size and proportions as my canvas. If you have any questions regarding photos, or would like my opinion on a photo, please feel free to email me. I will offer a different demonstration each day, most likely a landscape from a photo, a still life from direct observation, and a pet portrait from a photo.

I will be demonstrating in oil paint, but you are also welcome to use acrylic paints, pastels or any opaque medium, as the concepts are all similar. I stress "suggested" on this list. You are welcome to use whatever materials you prefer (alternate colors, brushes etc.).

Painting Surfaces

I prefer to work on panel mounted or stretched canvas/linen. Sizes vary, and you are welcome to choose whatever size you feel comfortable with. Painting smaller does not always make it easier! I will most likely be demonstrating with a 12"x16, which is a nice comfortable size.

Most art stores sell acrylic primed surfaces. These work very well, and you should feel free to use any of these available. I personally use oil primed surfaces, but if you are new to painting, you won't notice much of a difference. Acrylic painters, CANNOT use oil primed surfaces.

OPTIONAL: Staining

I dislike working on a stark white surface. This can be blinding when working in bright sun, and if I don't cover everything with paint, the white can be overwhelming. I stain the canvas with a very thin wash of a color, such as Burnt Umber. Wash it on thinly and then wipe most away leaving a light stain.

When working on an acrylic primed surface, the stain will also provide a bit of chemical adhesion when I start painting. This should be done a day before painting, so that the stain has time to dry.

Brushes

Synthetic or bristle brushes are extremely effective and inexpensive. I prefer flats due to their versatility. I only use three sizes - a #12 (1" wide), a #6 or #8 (1/2" wide), and a #2 or #3 (1/4" wide). Numbers vary between manufacturers.

Paints

All brands are definitely not equal. For the student, everything is acceptable so that there are no worries about using too much expensive paint. As you progress, you will want to experiment with different brands.

Premium Brands

Excellent paints, but at a premium price. These have a high saturation of pigment and flow extremely well. Includes brands like M. Graham, Maimeri, Holbein, Old Holland

Midgrade Brands

The most versatile of brands. Without the premium price, you might be less stingy with paint, and that's always a good thing. Includes brands like Richeson Shiva, Rembrandt, Utrecht, Winsor & Newton, Grumbacher Pre-Tested, Gamblin

Student Grade

For beginners, student grade brands are perfectly acceptable. They tend to be a bit stiffer in the way they flow, and the pigment is less saturated. Includes brands like Winton, Grumbacher Academy

My Color Choices

My palette changes constantly as I try new colors, but I always keep a consistent set of warm and cool. Below is my current palette. Please do not feel obligated to purchase all of these colors.

Titanium White - the most opaque of whites, but without the dangers of Flake White

Cadmium Yellow Medium - My warm yellow. I can easily cool this by adding white.

Cadmium Orange - I was given a number of tubes of this and found that it greatly reduced my use of Cadmium Yellow, as I normally mixed it with Cad Red for orange anyway.

Cadmium Red Light or Cadmium Red Pale - my warm red choice

Alizarin Crimson - my cool red choice

Yellow Ochre - the lightest of the earthtones on my palette

Burnt Sienna - another color that I find myself using less of. I can get a similar color by mixing other colors

Burnt Umber - mixes with other colors to make rich darks (Burnt Umber, Alizarin and Prussian Blue make a rich black)

Prussian Blue - my warm dark blue

Cobalt Blue - my cool blue

Cerulean Blue - my warm light blue

Additional colors I sometimes use:

Permanent Green Medium or Light or Cadmium Green - a warm green for landscapes

Viridian - a cool green for landscapes

Permanent Rose (Quinacridone) - a brighter version of Alizarin. Great for flowers.

Palette Knives

I tend to use palette knives only for surface prep or to remove paint from the surface.

Mediums

If you are painting with acrylics, water is all you will need. For oils, I use Odorless Mineral Spirits. If you prefer a cleaner version, I recommend Gamisol. If you are traveling to the class by air, please know that I will have plenty of mineral spirits available for you to use. It is very important that you have a proper container for your medium. I recommend a stainless steel brush washer. These come in a variety of sizes (the smallest is sufficient), and will last you forever. There are glass versions available, but these tend to easily break.

Palette

I use a Masterson Sta-Wet Palette. This is basically a tupperware container that you can seal your paints inside of so that they stay fresh longer. I've had a piece of glass cut to fit inside, which I can easily scrape clean with a razor as it becomes necessary. Another trick with a glass palette is that you can place a piece of colored paper behind it to match the color of your canvas. If you have a lot of oil paint left over, and know that you will not be able to paint for a number of days, the entire palette can be submerged in a tub of water where the paints will remain fresh until you return.

Disposable palette pads are also an inexpensive and easy option. I do not recommend using plastic palettes with recessed chambers. These work great for watercolor, but are too constricting for oils or acrylics.

Rags

Make sure to bring paint rags. I prefer to use old cut up blue jeans, because they don't produce a lot of lint, which can get caught up on your canvas. You can use paper towels if you like.

Easels

I recommend a portable easel, not only for the class, but for home and on location work as well. There are numerous styles and prices to choose from. Many will also hold supplies for easy transport.

Light

You will also want to bring an inexpensive light if you intend to paint a still life. This need not be anything fancy, and inexpensive ones can be found at any hardware store.

Special Offer From Jack Richeson

Jack Richeson & Co. contacted me and offered to put together sets of paints and brushes exclusively tailored for my workshops. I've been using Jack Richeson oils for 20 years now and I highly recommend them. These kits can be ordered directly from Judsons Art Outfitters at a significant discount. If you are interested in purchasing a kit, search for "Patrick Saunders Art" on Judsonsart.com or use the links to the products available on my website at <http://patricksaunders.com/classes.html>
